Katachi Vase, Big - Smoked Forest

Product Description

Katachi, meaning "shape" in Japanese, explores the delicate balance between light, shadow, and form.

Made from mouth-blown glass, each vase features an irregular surface that subtly distorts and refracts light, casting shifting reflections and soft shadows throughout the day.

The sculptural silhouette is both organic and precise, inviting movement and visual curiosity from every angle. The Smoked Forest hue offers distinct moody and atmospheric expression.

The Katachi vase is designed to be displayed alone or grouped in the different sizes to create a serene, architectural arrangement. Whether filled with branches, floral arrangements or left empty, they bring a quiet sense of poetry and presence to any space.

The Katachi Vase is well-suited for display on dining tables, sideboards, or windowsills where natural light can highlight its shifting reflections. Grouped in varying sizes, it creates a striking centerpiece for a large table while a single big vase can be placed directly on the floor adding sculptural elegance to any space.

Family Description Text

In Japanese, Katachi means "shape" a word that captures both the physical form of an object and the deeper idea of how form influences feeling. The Katachi Collection was born from this philosophy, exploring how light, shadow, and surface come together to create quiet moments of beauty.

Each vase is designed as a study in contrast: organic yet precise, raw yet refined. In mouth-blown glass, the irregular surface bends and scatters light, creating soft, shifting reflections that change with the passing day. In high-gloss ceramic, the mirror-like glaze amplifies its surroundings, turning the sculptural form into a play of reflections and shadows.

The inspiration lies in the Japanese appreciation for imperfection, the way irregularities in surface and silhouette invite us to see objects not as static but as alive with movement and atmosphere. Displayed alone, a single Katachi vase becomes a sculptural presence; grouped together, they form serene, architectural compositions.

Whether empty or holding a few simple branches, Katachi vases are more than vessels. They are quiet poems in shape, embodying the balance of stillness and motion, clarity and distortion, refinement and rawness.

Maintenance Guide Description

Though delicate in appearance, the glass is strong and durable, designed for everyday use in decorative and functional objects. To maintain its pristine look, we recommend regular cleaning with a soft microfiber cloth and a gentle glass cleaner or diluted soap solution. Spray the cleaner onto the cloth (not directly on the glass) and wipe in smooth, circular motions. Always dry with a clean cloth to prevent streaks or water marks. Avoid abrasive cleaners, scouring pads, or acidic substances, which can dull or damage the glossy surface. For tables, use coasters or felt pads under objects to prevent scratches or thermal shock from hot items. While the glass is moisture-resistant, it's best to avoid prolonged exposure to standing water or humidity, especially for vases empty and dry them between uses to preserve the finish. Elegant, minimal, and low-maintenance, our glass combines lasting beauty with functional design. With a little care, your table or vase will retain its distinctive charm for years to come

Materials Description

Our painted glass is created by applying pigment to the inner surface of the glass, a process that preserves the smooth clarity of the outer layer while enriching the material with depth and character. Though visually and tactilely identical to colored glass, the painted finish adds an artisanal dimension, with subtle variations that make each piece unique.

Durable yet refined, painted glass reflects light with the same purity and brilliance as coloured glass, offering a timeless surface that balances precision, craftsmanship, and contemporary expression.
