

Introducing A STUDY 001–Blæhr Vase: A Study in Glass Reimagined

Press Release

November 16th, 2023

NEW WORKS.

The Blæhr Vase, a testament to the ceaseless poetry that resides in glass, is poised for a renaissance. Designed by Linnea Ek Blæhr as the first part of the A STUDY project for New Works, this glass objet d’art is on the cusp of its resurgence, with fresh hues and new proportions set to debut this November.

In 2019, New Works unveiled an audacious exploration of glass in collaboration with Danish designer Linnea Ek Blæhr. The original Blæhr Vase defied convention through the intricate art of mouth-blown glass. Guided by a singular wooden mould, the glass was transformed into an exquisite, unpredictable form—conveying depth, character, and a play for the senses.

Returning to their origins, New Works resurrects the Blæhr series—a homage to design, the allure of natural elements, and a relentless curiosity for the creative process, reimagining the Blæhr Vase in two sizes. The original remains a commanding centrepiece that graces the room with or without blooms. Meanwhile, a more slender rendition finds a home on windowsills and in other narrower spaces, where it may hold florals or stand alone as a sculptural testament. It unfolds in three hues: clear, smoky green, and amber—each accentuating the vase’s unique, irregular surface, adding a touch of charm and grace to any environment. The Blæhr Vase—still a tribute to the art of glass design—continues to shatter glass’s conventional boundaries with this new edition.

ABOUT A STUDY

A STUDY is an ongoing creative workshop by New Works, a ceaseless voyage into materials and form. Orchestrated by the New Works design team, in close collaboration with a select group of creative visionaries, this initiative epitomizes New Works' guiding principles—thriving on a commitment to authentic materials, craftsmanship, and experimental production techniques that poetically express each material's true character—a slowly growing collection, where artistry and utility effortlessly intertwine.
